

MADAME MINNIE HANK left the Hongkong Hotel this morning for Canton, where she will probably remain until Tuesday next. On Thursday the prima donna will leave for Shanghai. No arrangements whatever have so far been made for a public appearance; many of our music lovers are anxious to hear Madame Hank, and it would be very regrettable if some musical spirit of reception should not be arranged prior to the departure from the Colony of one of the brightest stars of the operatic firmament.

The American yacht Sagamore, belonging to Mr. Edgar Scott, a wealthy Philadelphian well-known in connection with several railway concerns in the States, arrived in Hongkong from Manila to-day. The yacht is a good specimen of a gentleman's pleasure boat, being a three-masted steam yacht, 124 ft. in length over all, by 25 ft. broad and 12 ft. deep. She is on the register of the New York Yacht Club. She left the States last May, having on board, Mr. E. Scott, Mr. Hugh Scott, his nephew, the Rev. S. Billings, and a large party of Mr. Scott's relatives, bound for Egypt. The yacht first went to Southampton, and from there to Norway, where she did the principal fords, after which she went back to Southampton and refitted. She also shipped Capt. Cushing as commander. From Southampton she went to Gibraltar and the Mediterranean, calling at Marseilles, Ajaccio, Naples, Genoa, the Piræus, &c.; and, at Alexandria, discharged most of her passengers who intended visiting in Egypt. The only members of the party who journeyed on by the yacht were the Messrs. Scott and Billings, who travelled from Alexandria to Port Said, Aden, Muscat, Karachi, and Bombay, where they left to tour India. The Sagamore remained in Bombay a month and then sailed for Ceylon and the Far East. Panang and Singapore, Borneo and the Philippine Islands have been visited by the Sagamore, which will shortly proceed to the Chinese coast ports and Japan, probably returning to North America by New Zealand, South America, Cape Colony and West Africa. It is expected the trip will terminate about April, 1895.

THE POTTER-BELLEVUE COMPANY AT THE THEATRE ROYAL.

The Potter-Bellevue Company made their second appearance at the Theatre Royal last night, in "Francillon." There was again a good audience, and this must be attributed chiefly to the fame which Mrs. Potter and Mr. Bellevue have acquired throughout the Far East. Of the piece itself probably very few of the audience knew anything. It is of what Mr. Gilbert would call the "French-French" type. The motif of the play is simply marital infidelity. "Francillon" has been described as a comedy; but while there is some justification for placing it under that category, it seems, after all, to be more like tragedy than anything else. It might almost be called a study in the pathology of—well, let us say love, and so avoid using an objectionable term which Shakespeare frequently uses as a contrast to the other. To call "Francillon" a comedy, in the old-fashioned English sense of the term, would be to do abuse to the English language. The position of a husband and wife after the wife discovers her husband's violation of the sacrament of marriage could hardly be anything but tragic. However, it may be said that is a severely puritanical view of the matter, not in accordance with modern ideas, and that "Francillon" is really in the fin de siècle sense a comedy pure and simple. The story of "Francillon" is hardly worth telling, and if it were to be given it would not afford anybody any more amusement or edification than may be found in the details of an ordinary, everyday divorce case. It totters along on the borderland which divides the Proper from the Improper, and strays frequently into the latter region. The dialogue is full of wit, but it is a kind of wit which people, as a rule, do not laugh at. It is a kind of smoking-room, wit tempered and impured by a certain literary grace and polish which recalls to one's mind the somewhat illogical but suggestive remark of Burke, that vice divested of its grossness loses half its guilt. (We apologise to the shade of the eloquent orator, and author of "The Sublime and Beautiful," if we have misquoted him or attributed to him something which he did not write.) But, with all its literary excellence, "Francillon" is not what could be called an acceptable play. On the other hand, it must be admitted that it offers many opportunities for the display of histrionic talent—opportunities which on its presentation last night were taken advantage of almost to the utmost extent. Mr. Potter was, as a matter of course, the centre of attraction. She was impetuous, passionate, graceful, and tender, and even so exacting a critic as M. Sardou himself could hardly find any fault with her. In some of the scenes she showed a wonderful intensity of feeling. Her acting and declamation, her expression of conflicting emotions, in the final scene were all triumphantly good of her genre; and when directly charged with unfaithfulness she maintained an unflinching calm, which she made the more effective by her retort, "It is I who am the victim." Although many would prefer to see Mrs. Potter as Juliet or Romeo, she had the admiration of the whole audience last night as Francillon's heroine. Mr. Bellevue had not a great chance to display his histrionic talents, but he acted admirably as Lucien. The acting all round was excellent, and special praise is due to Miss Booth, Mrs. Cotton, Mr. Bawtree and Mr. Edgar Scott.

Zola's "Théâtre" is the piece selected for to-night.

TENNIS TOURNAMENT.

Results:—
DOUBLE HANDICAP.
In the semi-final of the first division Messrs F. N. Firth and C. M. Firth (own 15) beat Messrs W. Newton and R. W. Mainland (own 16), 8-6, 5-6, 8-6. The final will now be played between Messrs G. Bird and C. O. Platt (own 20) and Messrs Firth. This will bring the tennis tournament to a close.

THE ORESS CHAMPIONSHIP.

The latest news from America of the match for the championship of the world between Steinits and Lasker gives the score as follows:—Lasker, 4 wins; Steinits, 9 wins; draws, 2 games. Lasker won the first, third, seventh and eighth; Steinits won the second and fourth; and the fifth and sixth games were drawn. Steinits said that though he was two games behind he did not feel at all discouraged and was as confident as ever of winning. At the present rate of play the match will occupy several months. Steinits became champion in 1868 by his victory over Anderssen. Since then he has never lost a match.

Below we publish the fourth game in the match at present in progress in America between Steinits and Lasker for the championship of the world. The notes on the game are from the New York Recorder.

A good deal of surprise prevailed when, as we noted in the game, selected a Giuoco Piano. Not only because I have before have never been known to adopt this opening, but, moreover, because I chose a most universal form, which practically has been given up by the masters. The new plan, which I had in view did not come to the surface, as Lasker was the first to make an alteration from the usual line of play by his eighth move, B-K2.

My eleventh move proved a surprise, as I exchanged an apparently strong passed pawn, and furthermore, deliberately isolated my queen's pawn in order to keep up an attack against the king's side. On the thirteenth move Black initiated an ingenious counter attack and a regular fireworks game of sacrifice. After Black checked with his bishop, White, perhaps, would have done better to play his king to Q2, which would have yielded him a clear knight, whereas knight takes Q-P would have been followed, which Black evidently could not take on account of B-R2 winning the queen.

My nineteenth move was faulty; a subsequent examination showed that I should have taken the bishop instead of the knight. It would have been much sooner extricated me from all difficulties. With my twentieth move I forced a series of exchanges, which left me with a simple end game and a pawn ahead. A long struggle followed. White missed several chances of finishing off the game in a more easy manner. Note by the way, in the twenty-sixth move, when he should have played B-R2 instead of B-Q2, Lasker defended himself most ingeniously, and owing to some weak play on the other side, it is by no means certain that White would have won after neglecting the formidable R-KK2 in his forty-second move. However, Lasker completely compromised his game on his fifty-second and fifty-third moves by useless checks, which only helped White to bring his king to the support of his pawns, which now marched on victoriously.

Lasker has the following to say about the game:—
"Black springing an attack upon his adversary early in the game, leaving two pawns 'en prise,' which, however, could not have been taken because Black would have doubled his rooks on the king's bishop's file and thereby forced a win. White thereupon extricated himself skillfully and eventually secured a variation, by means of which he secured a pawn. The end game now became highly interesting, and White seemed to have the 'pull.' Black defended himself all right up to a certain point, but lost in the end by an obvious blunder when the game ought to have been a draw."
Many players thought that with 19, B-K2, Lasker could have forced a win. White, however, would have replied 20, P-B3, and if then 20, R-K2, 21, Q-K4, and if 20, B-K2, 21, R-B3, R-K2; 22, R-K2, and has the best of it.

'FRAGRANT WATERS' MUEMUR.

That the event of the week, whatever may be the outcome of it, is the appearance of the Public Petition to the House of Commons now in course of signature.

That it is admitted on all hands the present representation in the Legislative Council is inadequate, and differences of opinion can arise only as to the amount of additional representation asked for, or the particular mode of asking for it.

That, unfortunately, the views of our leading men do not accord exactly with the prayer of the Petition, and the representations will, therefore, fall about this much of unanimity.

That, apart from the questions whether the House of Commons will entertain the Petition and whether there is any chance of obtaining an Unofficial Majority in the Council, the minority who refrain from supporting the Petition put it that an Unofficial Majority in Council, in a Colony constituted like Hongkong, is undesirable for various reasons.

That it may be the Petition would have had a better chance of immediate consideration had it been addressed to the Secretary of State, and recommended to his notice by the Governor of the Colony.

That it is possible, in the event of a probable dissolution of Parliament within the next two months, the first assembly of gentlemen may be otherwise engaged than in considering such matters.

That the Petition itself, as read Par. 10, fully recognises the necessity for 'special legislation and guardianship,' and for 'paramount control' of Imperial interests by the Home Government.

That if the Imperial authorities lay it down that such 'paramount control' could not be regarded as compatible with an Unofficial Majority in the Legislative Council, such a dictum would settle the 'majority' question.

That the Petition, in very moderate and respectful language, lays special stress upon the guidance of local affairs in the Colony, and the right which British taxpayers ought to possess of having a say in the expenditure of public money.

That the increase of power to check expenditure, and to prevent the waste which has been but to prevent in the past, is the principal object, I take it, of the present petition.

That I see your morning contemporary still sticks to his idea of a Municipal Council as the best means of gaining this desirable object.

That if a Municipal Council were established, endowed with power to collect the house and other rates, and added with the responsibility of looking after the expenditure of the same, the duty of supervising large rates of money for Colonial purposes would still fall upon the Legislative Council.

That the proposal to appoint one or two unofficial members on the Executive Council, to advise that august and exclusive body upon matters where local and business experience are needed, will meet with unanimous approval.

That the good effect which has already resulted from the efforts of the unofficial members of the Council in the past ought to encourage all concerned to seek to extend that influence to a reasonable limit, either with or without the addition of municipal government.

That the Government has instructed its Chargé d'Affaires in London and Paris that China does not acknowledge any Siam rights over the districts north of 21°; and that, therefore, Siam has no power to hand over these districts that they may be formed into a Buffer State or other State, pull the curtains out of the fire for England. It is a great mistake to believe that the Celestial Empire is altogether a quiescent volcanic. It is indeed poorly equipped for offensive warfare, but its defensive strength is very great, and it is doubtful if any Power could or would attempt to force the Chinese to open up their country to a speedy conclusion.

The Chinese have always had a very bad opinion of foreigners, and this dislike is on the increase. And not without cause. Russia has appropriated the left bank of the Amur, the British the British Columbia and Mongolia. The Chinese have been driven by France out of Annam, by England out of Burma, and by Japan out of the Liao-tung, Korea, and the Japanese Islands. The position taken by the United States, Canada, and the Australian Colonies with regard to China is altogether a quiescent volcanic. It is indeed poorly equipped for offensive warfare, but its defensive strength is very great, and it is doubtful if any Power could or would attempt to force the Chinese to open up their country to a speedy conclusion.

That the movement now on foot, even if it be not the best that could have been conceived or is not addressed to the most likely place for redress, should excite a wholesome influence upon those who possess the 'paramount control' of the affairs of this Colony.

That the lovely weather now prevailing would be much more enjoyable were the water in the reservoirs not so villainously low.

That there must have been some reason in what your meteorological correspondent said about Canopus and Alpha-Centauri, in spite of the brief rain-shower which followed the expression of his prophetic opinion.

That the fire-brand is having its own way to a much greater extent than formerly, owing to the scarcity of water, and I hear the Fire Brigade are now broken-hearted over the ill-success of their labours.

That the epidemic in Canton, so carefully and moderately referred to by your contributor, must be set down in a great measure to the insanitary conditions brought about by the lengthened drought.

That so far as I can learn, the disease has not made its appearance in Hongkong, and it is confined to certain districts in Canton City.

That I hear the Unconformable Registrar General (as head of the Sanitary Board) has been busy addressing his friend the Acting Colonial Secretary on this and other matters.

That there is yet another memo. for the Re-appointment Commission, this time in connection with the Lighthouse Department.

That the Principal Lighthouse-keeper (Mr. Archie Baird), who was in charge of 'A' Agular Light and has about twenty years' service, left on a year's leave the other day.

That his occupation has gone, his Ope light being out, and there might be a saving effected of a considerable sum.

That the plea for the Post Office which I sent to you, from 'A Late Clerk of the Post Office,' was couched in such unobjectionable language that I had no scruple in asking you to publish it in full.

That the 'Late Clerk' agrees so thoroughly with the Editor's estimate of the work of the Post Office, as at present managed, that the most need be said on the subject.

That the 'Late Clerk' arrives at the terrible conclusion that the Hongkong Post Office will suddenly collapse, unless something is done to ameliorate the condition and increase the number of its staff.

That undermanagement, overwork, poor pay, and unhealthy surroundings are given as the reason why the work is badly done.

That what I contended was, that the staff had had no rest, and that the duties were not being performed so well as they were two or three years ago.

That the complaints which I allude to continually receiving are by no means trifling, nor could they be explained by long hours or an undermanned staff.

That nothing was said about a Local Post Office by anyone save the 'Late Clerk' himself, and the Estimates throw no light upon any unfilled promise of the Government as to Local Delivery.

That I am glad to hear the grasscutters and others did not get alarmed by the 'Late Clerk's' remarks, as they were only uttered in obedience to orders given by the Police.

That the bell-ringer at the little church at the West end would be reasoned with by the worthy Father.

That if he cannot 'wag his tongue' more manfully than he does at present, he should really be spoken to seriously.

That to take lessons in bell-ringing before sunrise is very like taking a mean advantage of poor neighbours who do not rise with the lark.

That the Unofficial Harbour Board—or shipyard as it was named to advise with the Harbour Master on matters connected with the Harbour—have not yet been called upon for an opinion.

That apparently the Official Ministry at the Harbour Office has it all its own way—more's the pity.

That a small Commission has been appointed, but not gazetted, to investigate the claims of certain Chinese to build new wharves on the new Quay.

BROWNIE.

WHY CHINA DISTRUSTS THE POWERS.

We take the following from the New York Literary Digest, Vol. 10, No. 1, contributed by a German scholar to the Deutsche Rundschau, Breslau, in which he points out the causes of China's dislike of the nations of Europe. He writes:

By the annexation of the left bank of the Mekong River, France hopes to put herself in the position of the dominant Power in the East. This is not a new ambition, but it is a new one in the eyes of the Chinese. It is a great mistake to believe that the Celestial Empire is altogether a quiescent volcanic. It is indeed poorly equipped for offensive warfare, but its defensive strength is very great, and it is doubtful if any Power could or would attempt to force the Chinese to open up their country to a speedy conclusion.

only the Conservatives but also the Liberals of the Empire are distrustful of strangers. The missionary function is also a very important one with the Chinese. Not only have all foreigners a right to worship as they please in China, but full protection is given to all missionaries going into the interior, although France alone stipulated this in her Treaty with China, and therefore, the admission of other than Catholic missionaries is entirely voluntary on the part of China, and there are now between 1,500 and 2,000 missionaries in the interior, many of whom are accompanied by their families. The independence of the religious importance of this, it must be of great advantage to civilisation to have a number of cultured and refined foreigners settled in the country; but, unfortunately, hundreds of uneducated persons have been sent out, many of whom have not even received a proper training for their special work.

These people must bring about a conflict through their ignorance, and they endanger the safety of the whole foreign community. Sweden is hardly in a position to enforce the punishment of the murderers of her missionaries at Hanyu, and if those murderers are not punished to the full extent, the security of all the foreigners in the Empire is endangered.

ANTI-FOREIGN FEELING IN THE 30th ULU, that a Russian gentleman, who went up to the Yung-tung tea districts to make observations on the Chinese mode of preparing tea, and other matters connected therewith, had a very narrow escape from being stoned to death by a Native mob. In fact, it appears that he was only saved from sharing the fate of the Chinese victims through the commendable action of his Native boy and cook, who carried him in an unconscious state under a shower of stones to the nearest village, where he happened to be close by, and attended to his wounds. The infuriated mob tried to force the yamen doors, but fortunately did not succeed, having arrived in time. No provocation whatever preceded the attack, and from what we learn of the gentleman's disposition, it is beyond doubt that anything had happened that could have given rise to bad feeling. The only explanation therefore is to be found in the fact that the gentleman was employed by the Russian Consulate to purchase a number of tea plants, and the Native are afraid of losing their means of livelihood. However, this only partly explains the attack, for, whilst the firm had trouble with their purchases in the Ningbo district, everything went smooth and in a friendly way in Yung-tung, so that the people must have been put up to it by some miscreant.

The matter is in the hands of the Russian Consul, we are told, and we feel sure, will be taken up energetically and without a repetition of the blunders that have marked the Sui-ping affair as one of the most detrimental to the prestige of Foreigners in China.

The attack proves beyond any doubt that the Anti-Foreign movement is not directed solely against missionaries and not against Soudanians only, but that, unless strong measures be taken, we may without doubt expect to hear of more such attacks ere long.

We are glad to record that the gentleman has returned to Hankow, and is doing well.
